

UI Design Patterns

In our website we show information about scholarships, grants, and financial aid. And to make it look Good for a new user, we used the layout of "accordion." It's a way to cram a ton of information into a small space by letting users expand and collapse sections as they need to.

Thanks to the accordion, we are able to give out all the details on each scholarship, grant, or financial aid program. When you click on a program, you got all the details about deadlines, requirements, and how to apply. And we could fit it all onto one page without it being too cramped, the accordion was huge when making our website super easy to use and navigate.

In conclusion, using UI patterns like the accordion was a smart choice for our project. It made the website look better and way easier to use. This just goes to show how UI patterns can make a difference in improving the user experience on a website, our goal is to help people find the benefits of being an student, so the information must be what they were looking and should be delivered as fast as posible to provide a better experience.

<https://www.interaction-design.org/literature/topics/ui-design-patterns?locale=es-us#:~:text=User%20interface%20%28UI%29%20design%20patterns%20are%20reusable/recurring%20components%2cthe%20specific%20context%20of%20use>