When using Chat GPT I have been surprised how fast it creates any type of program that you ask it to, but I have not been able to specify the design to the point that it creates what in my mind I already have an outline of what I really want in my program. I feel that the programs that this tool throws at me are functional but they are not so satisfactory in terms of usability but if you tell it part by part what you want it surely gives you the idea of how you can do it.

In my opinion I would not change the role of UX as I feel that design is still a human skill factor but I feel that it can be very useful when prototyping any application.
